NUMBER ONE

RAINBOW DIVISION VETERANS

DURING the year just past, the Rainbow Division Veterans has grown from the few men who conceived the idea of such an Association early in March, 1919, to an organization of twelve thousand members, with chapters in the twenty-seven states represented in the Rainbow (42nd) Division.

Much of the Association's accomplishment during this year has been but the foundation for future service. We know that the men who fought together and sacrificed together during the trying months of the world's greatest struggle, came home with far more than a clear battle record—they created and fostered a common bond of sympathy and comradeship that is a part of each and every one of them. We cannot forget this service, even if such were our choice.

And to those of our number who rest in France, there is a deeper and more solemn obligation which we must not pass. We are to commemorate the deeds for which they so nobly paid the supreme sacrifice. We believe it our duty to serve the less fortunate one and to bring cheer into the home that has been broken. The record of sub-chapter organizations in this connection has been our deepest source of pride.

To make all these hopes a reality, the Association has bent every effort in the organization of your state chapter, and the creating of sub-chapter organizations within the state, that the spirit of the Rainbow might never be demobilized though its members be scattered to the far corners of the world.

ORGANIZED and facing the issue squarely, there can be but one plan of campaign for the coming year. The General Order of the Rainbow (42nd) Division has never changed since the days of Champagne, Chateau Thierry and the Argonne. It still reads "Forward," and we have stripped our packs for the charge.

Twelve thousand ex-service men of the Rainbow Division have lined up with the Rainbow Division Veterans, firmly determined to see their Association established. State and Sub-chapter Secretaries are combing the woods for Rainbows, but if the program in hand is to be completely carried out, we must have the active and hearty support of every member. Remember, you are a "Volunteer." Figure out some way that you can be of service and then tell us about it.

While many of the plans of the Association have been realized during the past year, we are confronted with new and perplexing problems as the Rainbow Division Veterans grows. Members are becoming more and more absorbed by their civilian duties, and we find our number widely scattered. Liaison is difficult, but we propose to establish it and then by some means keep it up. There is a best way to serve the men of the Rainbow, and that way is our plan for 1920. With your cooperation, we cannot fail.

Let our motto for this year be, "The Rainbow Division Veterans, Now and Always," and the result will be sure and lasting. Success may come by Accident but it has a habit of coming with Cooperation. Let's pull together.

A LASTING PEACE

With malice toward none, with Charity for all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the Nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and orphans; to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations.

—From Lincoln's Second Inaugural Address.

EDITORIAL

THE RAINBOW REVIEW

A. G. Brown.....Secretary and Editor

Published by the Rainbow Division Veterans, State House, Columbus, Ohio, in the interest of its membership.

INTRODUCTION

THE purpose for the existence of this pamphlet is one of greater service, by bringing to the home of every member of the Rainbow Division Veterans such information and news as may be of particular interest and benefit to him as a civilian. It is our aim that this magazine become a regular part of the work of the Association in the form of a monthly publication, and that this number will pave the way for another issue.

Do not forget that this is your Association and your Magazine. As you contribute to them so shall they grow and be of service. After reading this Baccarat Number, think of your "buddie." It may be that he did not get a copy. Then talk it over and tell us how to make the next number a more interesting one.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

NO doubt you have been asked this very same question a number of times, "What about the American Legion?"

The American Legion is an organization of all ex-service men and women of the World War. It stands without a peer among the ex-soldier organizations that have come out of this struggle, and there is little doubt but it will be with us long after many of the others are forgotten. There is no finer expression of loyalty to God and Government, or of the duties of citizenship, than the statement of the purposes of the American Legion as outlined in the Preamble to their constitution.

For more than half a century, the members of The Grand Army of the Republic have constituted a stabilizing influence and force in government. They have been the personification of loyalty and have always been true to the highest ideals of liberty under law. The American Legion will undoubtedly exercise a similar influence in the years to come.

The Rainbow Division Veterans endorses the American Legion, and urges cooperation with the Post in your locality.

JUSTICE FOR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

THE American Legion, through its Executive Committee, is asking that Uncle Sam pay to all ex-service men and women a selective compensation for service during the war.

Under this plan, every former soldier, sailor or marine may select for himself what sort of benefits or additional compensation he will receive from the United States, for the financial losses he sustained by going to war. He may choose one of these four things, and one only:

The Four Options

1—A farm, to be bought on easy payments under the Lane-Mondell Act, as amended.

2—A loan with which to buy a home in a city or town. The plan by which these loans shall be made must be determined by a commission to be named by Congress, and the loans will not be available for some months.

3—Vocational training at Government expense. While he is at school, learning a skilled trade, he will be paid by the Government as disabled men are now paid under the vocational training act.

4—Additional compensation in United States Government bonds at the rate of $50 for every month he was in the service.

The matter has been referred to the Ways and Means Committee for recommendation. And the Legion is right on the ground to see that they do recommend something.

When one reflects and considers the millions that have been wasted in this war, together with the unlimited field that exists for the raising of such funds, it seems hardly possible that this grand old Republic could so long overlook its obligation to the men who served it through this trying period. These men have certainly evidenced their worthiness by patience in the matter, but there is even an end to this virtue.

The ex-service men are not asking for a bonus. What they do want is additional compensation that will in some manner put them on an equal financial footing with the stay-at-home patriot. They want only what they have earned, and they have earned just what the laborer did through the industries they made possible. A $50 bond for each month of service is certainly conservative.

A RAINBOW CLUB

STILL blowing bubbles? Not so many months ago, and while you were still in O. D., you vowed to keep the old gang together, to form a Club in the old home town. Just a place where you could sink down into a real chair, smoke an American made cigar or cigarette, and spin yarns about the days over there. More than twenty-five such clubs have been formed and the plan is growing more popular every day. What about your locality. A splendid time to start something is NOW, while everybody is full of Rainbow jazz, and thinkin' about the old "roll-yer-pack" days.

STATE CONVENTIONS

EACH State Chapter of the Rainbow Division Veterans will hold a convention or reunion prior to July 12-14, 1920, the date of the National Convention in Birmingham, Alabama. At these State Conventions, delegates to the National Convention will be selected and instructed. Each Chapter will be entitled to one delegate per one hundred members or major portion thereof and two delegates at large. This state convention will be your first opportunity, since the Rainbow was demobilized, to shake with the top sergeant and the captain. Plans for the organization in your state, legislation for ex-soldiers, and general topics of interest will be discussed. You can't afford to miss this reunion, it only comes once a year. Make every effort to be on hand and get into the game. Let the boys know that you are there.

NATIONAL CONVENTION

Birmingham, Alabama, July 12, 13 and 14, 1920

Everyone who served with the Rainbow (42nd) Division is welcome, either as a delegate or a guest. Alabama is leaving no stone unturned to make this one of the greatest gatherings ever held by ex-members of a combat division. Reports indicate that delegations will be strong, and that special trains will carry the Rainbows from New York, Chicago, Columbus, and other cities. And Alabama has entire charge of the arrangements for the convention. Boys, you know this gang. Webster forgets to put the word "failure" in their dictionary and they don't know what it means. An interesting program for the three days is already assured.

AUXILIARIES

WHILE no special provision was made in our constitution for the formation of such social organizations as Ladies' Auxiliaries to the Rainbow Division Veterans, the National and State organizations have thought it imperative that they be encouraged and that every effort be made to link them up with the sub-chapter in all matters of welfare and sociability. Wives, mothers and sisters of men who served with the Rainbow Division are eligible to membership in such an Auxiliary. Ladies' Auxiliaries will be approved of by the Chapter or sub-chapter with which they are associated, will be endorsed by the state organization and chartered by the National organization.

It is to be remembered that such Auxiliaries are in no way a part of the Rainbow Division Veterans, and that members will not be entitled to wear the official insignia of this organization.

OUR YESTERDAYS

"The trials, the struggles, and the agonies of the 42nd Division are past, and only its glory is left. Its deeds have become traditional, and the units which composed it have entered into the archives of fame of the American Army; its graves scattered from the poppy fields of Picardy to the pine clad hills of Switzerland mark the mile-stones of its immortality. It has written its history in letters of red upon the German breast, and I can add nothing to it. I can only send to each and every one of its members the affectionate greeting of their old comrade in arms.

Very sincerely,

Douglas MacArthur."

THE BACCARAT SECTOR

LORRAINE and Spring of 1918 will always be closely associated in the memories of the "Quarante Deuxieme Division," and what a varied train of associations these two words bring in their wake. Trench Warfare—our first sector; seen by the glare of the rockets; artillery fire; the whistling of machine gun bullets overhead; the making of our first relief; standing to in the dim hours of the morning with the thought of German Veterans in front of us; these were the emotions that filled our minds when we first entered the Lorraine Lines. In the light of after events, how different they all seem. It was the youth of the Division, before the days of Champagne, Chateau Thierry and the Argonne; those terrible days that were to bring the Forty-second to its maturity and make it the shock division of the American Expeditionary Forces. Strange it seems to go back to those Lorraine Hills where we gazed for the first time into that mysterious unknown of which we had heard so much, and whose fame had filled the imagination of the world for four years; to peer again into No Man's Land and over the crest see the enemy lines. The more tragic events that were to follow have somewhat dimmed the memory of those early days, and by contrast, how serene they seem in comparison with that long odyssey

MEMORIAL

PLANs are under way for a National Memorial to be erected in Washington, D. C., in memory of the dead of the American Army, Navy and Marine Corps, and other organizations which served with them in the world war. At a meeting of representatives of these organizations in Washington on January 19th, 1920, it was decided to incorporate a National Memorial Association for the purpose of designing, financing and erecting such a memorial. The National Commander of the American Legion was named as chairman of the Executive Board of this association.

The question of a Rainbow Division Memorial to be placed in Arlington National Cemetery, will be taken up at the National Convention in July.

"There isn't any magic formula that makes men win. When intelligence is backed up by the determination not to stay down, the only thing under the sun that is impossible is something that can't be imagined. Half of greatness lies in decision and action."

—Herbert Kaufman.

Some Date—"Among the memorable dates in history," wrote a boy, "was Anthony's date with Cleopatra." What about that date with "Big Bertha?"

I like you for the good you do and you like me for the good I do—we are both strangers. A kind word, a friendly thought or a good deed makes all of us feel better.

—The Live Wire.

IMMORALITY

The following lines were written by Rev. Allsey Oscar Browne, M. D., Honorary Member of the New Orleans Sub-chapter, Rainbow Division Veterans, on the date of the death of his son, Allsey Oscar Browne, Jr., 150th F. A., in France. Dr. Browne relates that while written under protest, they were written with a profound conviction that the son had entered into the higher realm of being. To the few who do not believe in the Immortality of the soul, here is food for thought.

"Under the sod,
Oh Gracious God,
Somewhere in France lies sleeping.
A dear Boy of mine,
In spirit so firm,
I know he is in Thy keeping."

—Allsey Oscar Browne.

whose turning marks may be traced by the rows of crosses on the banks of the Marne, the Ourcq, and later on the Meuse.

At Baccarat, in comparative quiet, with the fast approaching spring, the mud and the horrors of the Epic Winter March of the Division were gradually forgotten and the troops waited serene and confident on guard in the passes of the Vosges, whose forest shade and verdure reminded them of the foot-hills of the Alleghenies. The Vosges valleys were indeed beautiful but some twenty centuries of civilization had mellowed their once rugged lines. Scenery, well, it may have been that to those who had the advantage of a limousine, but the doughboy with his full pack, his iron lid, and his hob nails, had quite another name for it. But even war could not break the spirit of the American soldier, and through it all he was a real philosopher. In fact I believe that all good soldiers are, and although many of us paid the highest price for it, the Army was the one school that taught us the most. In spite of our resolves to do this and that, to go gunning for the top sergeant, and to muss up the Second "Loot," just as soon as we were discharged, they have been forgotten just like a New Year's resolution. Instead, as Old Bill says, "We sort of miss the blinkin' war now she's over."

We had come to Lorraine with the strains of Madelon in our ears, and time and again we assured the natives that "The Yanks were coming." Finally our artillery was in position, occupied itself pleasantly by "potting" villages occupied by the Germans, battalions relieved each other regularly, the Commissary was functioning fairly well, and on the whole it was a pleasant war. Occasionally a Boche patrol wandered into our lines, and we returned the compliment with regularity. The reports of the German offensives in the North and against Paris made us chafed in this so-called quiet sector. Although slightly jaded by four months of trench warfare, there was the desire for open combat and an opportunity to throw its weight against the Germans. Although the Projector Gas Attacks had thrown a pall over that last month in the Baccarat Front and our casualties had been heavy, yet there were brighter days. Mess call comes, even after battle, not in the familiar bugle strains but in the shape of a corporal with a few cartons of hard tack and a can of gold fish. Occasionally it was worse, and once or twice it was better. In any event, the meadow or the roadside served as your breakfast room and you could eat peas with a knife if you chose.

Montigny, Pexonne, Neuville, Ste. Pole and St. Maurice with their ruins will long remain engraved in the memories of the Infantry of the Rainbow Division. Poste de Chasseurs on our right and Ancerviller on our left marked our front and a curtain of hills shut it off from the Valley of the Meurthe and Baccarat, the Division Headquarters. War had touched but lightly that valley and the city, except for the squares across the bridge leading up to the heights of Domevre. Here destruction had been meted out in its worst form, the Cathedral and squares about it completely wrecked. Various explanations concerning this havoc are offered by the inhabitants of Baccarat, the prevailing one being that of incendiary bombs at the time of the German retreat in 1914. The fact remains, however, that only the buildings on one side of the River Meurthe have been so destroyed, while the other side containing the famous Baccarat Glass Works somehow escaped.

BACCARAT

Baccarat was always a pleasant place for the soldiers on a day's leave from the trenches. I remember one evening seeing one of the dough-boys seated at a rustic table in front of the inn at the turn of the road to Merviller, perspiring and dusty though he was, he was smiling. With a big tumbler of that Baccarat beer in front of him, he seemed so contented. But little did he know that his call had come. The Orders were already at Division Headquarters, and this time it was to be the Champagne Front and his last battle.

The tour of the 42nd Division on this Baccarat Front will long remain in our literature, it has been recorded in lines that will outlast even the stone; school children of future generations will read of Rouge Bouquet, that dug out grave where our comrades lie "never to laugh or to love again or to taste the summer time."

On June 20th, 1918, the 42nd Division left the Baccarat Front for the Champagne. Strange coincidence it was the 42nd French Division that broke the German Center in the battle of the Marne in 1914, and her sister, the 42nd American Division that was attached to the 21st French Army Corps, to break the last offensive of the Bavarians and the Guards in 1918.

—A Rainbow Division Veteran.

THE SWEET BILL

UNDER the Amendment to the War Risk Act which became a law on December 24th, 1919, War Term Insurance or United States Government life (converted) insurance policies may be made payable to any of the following beneficiaries:

Parent, grandparent, step-parent, wife or husband, child, step-child, adopted child, grandchild, brother, sister, half brother, half sister, brother through adoption, sister through adoption, step-brother, stepsister, parent through adoption, uncle, aunt, nephew, niece, brother-in-law, sister-in-law; persons who have stood in the relation of a parent to you for a period of one year or more prior to your enlistment or induction, or the child or children of such persons; parent, grandparent, step-parent, or parent through adoption of your wife or husband.

United States Government life (converted) insurance may now be paid at death in lump sum or in 36 or more monthly installments, at the option of the insured.

The rates of compensation have been greatly increased, in fact, they have been almost doubled in a number of instances.

The ex-soldier who held on to his Government insurance and the man who is entitled to compensation under this act should acquaint himself with its provisions at once.

Those who dropped their War Risk Insurance, allowed it to lapse, will want to REINSTATE before it is too late. Your policy may be reinstated up to July 1st, 1920, either in whole or in part, by the payment of two months' premium. One month of the payment is to cover the period of grace during which time your policy was in force, and the other is for the month in which you reinstate. Policy may be converted into any one of six standard forms at any time within five years from the date of the declaration of Peace, and may be converted in part or in whole.

With the wide scope of beneficiaries allowed, with death claims payable either in lump sum or installments, and with the cost from 10 to 25% below that of commercial companies, to say nothing about the future earning possibility of your policy, THERE IS NO GROUND FOR ARGUMENT—REINSTATE TODAY. For detailed information, ask any American Legion Post, The Rainbow Division Veterans, or write to the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, Washington, D. C.

SERVICE

Honorary members of the Rainbow Division Veterans are entitled to wear the Official Insignia.

The United States Department of Justice is starting out on the right track. To date, 35,000 slackers or evaders of the draft have been arrested. There are still 100,000 on the waiting list. Sounds good, n'est-ce pas.

You may get your barrack bag by writing to Lost Baggage Pier, Hoboken, N. J., giving description and exterior markings.

Out of 302,612 casualties in the A. E. F., New York ranks first with 40,222; Pennsylvania second with 35,042; Illinois third with 18,264; Ohio fourth with 16,007; and Massachusetts fifth with 13,505. The casualties in the 42nd Division numbered 14,577 or 4.4% of the entire casualties in the A. E. F.

A lost discharge certificate cannot be duplicated. A certificate of service may be secured in lieu thereof by writing to the Adjutant General of the Army, Washington, D. C., using Form 214-AGO.

Wanted—A copy of that book you have written about your organization. "Bill" wants to read it.

The complete history of the 42nd Division is being written by the Historian of the Rainbow Division Veterans, Walter B. Wolf, No. 10 S. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

Any claim against the Government which is giving you difficulty may be taken up with the American Legion, your Rainbow Secretary, or A. G. Brown, State House, Columbus, Ohio.

Four thousand ex-service men of St. Louis have asked Congress for immediate legislation granting a substantial bonus.

Members may be transferred from one state to another. Ask your state secretary about it.

You should have a membership card. Did you get it?

CHAPTER ACTIVITY

California will hold a State Convention in Los Angeles, on April 11th. This state furnished the 2nd Battalion of the 117th Engineer Regiment. Two sub-chapters have been organized, one in Los Angeles and the other in Sacramento, and the latchstring is always out. The Los Angeles Club Room is located at 434 Byrne Building.

Ohio has organized twelve sub-chapters over the state and boasts of a membership of over 2200. Reunion of the 166th Infantry will be held in Columbus on May 14th and 15th, and rumor has it that a special train will carry the delegation to Alabama next July.

Alabama is making a specialty of Clubrooms and Auxiliaries, and they have a fine lead in this direction. H. L. Carter, State Secretary, states that enthusiasm over the coming convention is running at high tide and that they are expecting a large attendance. Dances and banquets are of weekly occurrence in Montgomery, Mobile and Birmingham, and it begins to look like they meant it when they said "Mountain Dew."

Oklahoma ambulanceers are painting the town red in Tulsa. They have a lively chapter, and a ladies' auxiliary. What more can a man want. Convention in Tulsa June 19th. The Rainbow women entertained the boys on December 30th, and on February 11th presented General Pershing with a laurel victor's wreath.

Oh you Supply Train! Col. W. E. Talbot of Dallas, Texas, writes that there are three sub-chapters in that state—Dallas, Austin and Houston. In Dallas, they have taken over the rooms occupied by the War Camp Community Service. Not long ago, this chapter fostered a concert given by Oscar Seagle, famous American baritone, at the City Temple, with marked success.

The South Carolina Engineers are not to be outdone. In the early part of February, this chapter had a rousing get-together and banquet at Columbia. The boys report that in spite of the absence of Vin Rouge and River Biscuits, they made out fairly well. Guests from the 149th F. A. and the 168th Infantry were present.

Indiana has just elected a new Secretary, Sidney S. Miller, Lemcke Annex, Indianapolis. Major Miller states that they will be at this convention in July and that the state is undertaking to complete the organization prior to that time. We just couldn't get along without that Heavy Artillery, could we boys.

Minnesota has a paid up membership for the entire strength of its organization. These boys will probably come down to Alabama with their fur coats on, but they'll be there.

Wisconsin has four sub-chapters, one for each company, and they only need to round up about three more members to complete the roster. These "lumber jacks" are there with the goods,

DISTURBED WATERS

It seems that even the Rhine is disgusted with things as they are in Germany, or perhaps since the withdrawal of nearly all the American Army of Occupation, the Germans have relaxed in their

"Wacht am Rhein," for in January the peaceful waters got real "hostile" and invaded all the rich bottoms as well as the towns and villages which dot the picturesque valley.

Major Robert Haubrich, of Columbus, Ohio, received the above photograph of the main street (Coblener Strasse) of Oberwinter, under seven feet of water. Normally, the waters of the beautiful river cannot be seen from this street, the harbor being about 300 yards away and 50 feet lower.

This was the final parking place of the 67th Field Artillery Brigade, and a battalion of the 166th Infantry did the "Wacht" stuff here for four months in 1918-1919. The town of Oberwinter will be remembered by all Rainbow men as the entraining point (hommes 40—cheveaux 8 style) on the return of the Rainbow Division to the United States.

"Prosit" Oberwinter am Rhein, wet yet.

and Alabama had better lease a place on the river for the boys to park their logs.

New York Chapter holds its meetings at the Armory, and they have had several rousing times. Meetings are attended by about 500, while their membership totals 1700. This is the home of the 77th Division, and the Marines, but the boys of the old 69th can't be bothered.

Maryland has just completed the organization of her state chapter. Meetings are held at the 117th Trench Mortar Battery Club, 705 Cathedral St., Baltimore.

Reports of other Chapters will be given in the next issue.—The Editor.
